Introduction to groundwork
For Adults and Teens (14 years and older)

The usual purpose of groundwork is to train a horse from its first mounting. However, more and more, its value for trained horses has come to be appreciated. Therefore, groundwork has become a wonderful alternative to riding when a horse or rider is ill or old or just needs a change. Through groundwork, the horse learns to pay more attention to the body language of its trainer and the trainer becomes more conscious of his own body. In this way, the relationship between horse and rider becomes more intensified and enhanced.

Content: ▪ Multifaceted leading
 ▪ basics of body language

Baroque Dressage

The art of classical baroque dressage is a cultural asset from the 16th century. In the meantime, this riding style has gained enormous popularity with hobby riders. This riding style demands more than just riding in historical costumes on horses which seem to perform the most amazing steps all on their own. This style, which has lived on for many hundreds of years in the Viennese court riding school and the Spanish and French riding school, has one specific aim: the perfect harmony between horse and rider. In addition, the horse receives optimal exercise training.
